EXTRAORDINARY .- We saw on yesterday as we passed along Washington street, a sign on the door of a business room, indicating that the room was for rent. This is the first time within two years, so far as our knowledge goes, that a business room on Washington street has been allowed to become vacated without another tenant being in readiness to take possession. Indeed, so great has been the demand, that rooms have generally been engaged long before the occupying tenant would be ready to vacate it. We chronicle this fact because it is a phenomenon in this city. Of course Wiley & Martin will not be permitted long to keep their placard "To Rent" on the door. INUNDATION,-The useless fragment of a ennal which has afflicted Indianapolis for years, has proved itself to be a nuisance. Yesterday morning at about 7 o'clock, on the north bank of a race that had been constructed leading from the canal to certain mills, close to West street and immediately opposite the Old Fair Ground, a crevasse was sprung, letting into the inclosure known as the Old Fair Ground a necessary to repair the south side of the porflood of water. The wood, wagons, etc., were half submerged in the watery element.

New York street, from West street, several squares westward, was flooded with water as ward. The water found an outlet on west New York street, and flowing down the lower grounds again emptied into the race.
